

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE 9/9/2026

Three reasons to book Kent's new Inclusion Conference Centre: save £50, choose a venue with character, and support life-changing opportunities

Businesses, organisations and community groups looking for a meeting space with more to offer can now book Canterbury Oast Trust's new Inclusion Conference Centre at Highlands Farm, Woodchurch, with £50 off every booking made by 31 December 2026.

The venue brings together three strong reasons to book:

1. A budget-friendly, limited-time saving,
2. A beautiful countryside setting at the Rare Breeds Centre farm.
3. The chance to support adults with learning disabilities and autism to gain skills for employment.

Whether you are planning a meeting, training day, away day, workshop, conference, board meeting, team-building session or corporate event, the Inclusion Conference Centre offers a professional space with a difference.

Sarah Edwards, CEO of Canterbury Oast Trust, said: "Every booking creates opportunity. Organisations are not simply hiring a room; they are helping adults with learning disabilities and autism gain the skills, confidence and experience they need to move towards paid employment and greater independence."

The Inclusion Conference Centre can accommodate up to 100 delegates and includes flexible room layouts, audio-visual facilities, high-speed internet access, presentation equipment and catering options. Full-day bookings run from 9.00am to 4.30pm, with half-day bookings available in the morning or afternoon.

Organisations making a full-day booking can also enjoy recreational time on the Rare Breeds Centre farm as part of their day.

1. Save £50 on every booking

For a limited time, organisations can save £50 on conference centre hire when they book before 31 December 2026. The offer applies to all bookings, making now the ideal time to try this new Kent venue.

The centre offers flexible half-day and full-day options for groups of up to 30, 50 or 100 delegates, with catering, evening hire, farm-based recreation and volunteering experiences available to discuss as part of your booking enquiry.

2. Meet somewhere with character

Set within the peaceful countryside surroundings of the Rare Breeds Centre farm, the Inclusion Conference Centre offers a refreshing alternative to standard hotel or office-based venues.

With access to the wider farm setting, organisations can add something memorable to their day from team-building and volunteering opportunities to recreational time on the Rare Breeds Centre farm.

3. Choose a venue with purpose

Every booking supports Canterbury Oast Trust's Supported Employment Pathways programme, helping adults with learning disabilities and autism build skills, confidence and experience in a real working environment.

Opened in July 2026, the centre gives learners practical experience in hospitality, catering, customer service and event support as they work towards paid employment and greater independence.

Organisations interested in making a booking can complete the Inclusion Conference Centre enquiry form via the Canterbury Oast Trust website or contact the events team at events@canterburyoasttrust.org.uk.
